

Case Summary Report

Case Summary Report:

User Problem: My brother has kicked me out of my house and taken possession of it. The house is jointly registered in my name and his.

Case Category: Property Dispute - Confidence: 90%

Rights Summary:

* You have the right to recover possession of your house. If you have been dispossessed of your immovable property (house) without your consent and not through due process of law, you can file a suit to recover its possession. This right applies even if your brother claims a different title to the property.

Readiness Score: 30/100 (Partially Ready)

Breakdown:

* Documents: 60/100

* Witnesses: -30/100

* Urgency Penalty: 0/100

Missing Documents with Costs:

* CNIC: Critical document, can be obtained from NADRA office. Estimated time: 10-15 working days (normal), 5-7 working days (urgent). Estimated cost: PKR 1000-2500.

* Witness statements: Important document, obtained from individuals who witnessed the event and notarized. Estimated time: Varies (depends on witnesses' availability and willingness). Estimated cost: PKR 500 (notary fee per statement).

Key Risks Highlighted:

* The legal process to recover possession through a lawsuit can be lengthy, potentially taking 3 to 12 months or more.

* You will need to gather and present strong evidence to prove your previous possession and the unlawful dispossession by your brother.

* Legal proceedings can be emotionally and financially demanding.

* Be very careful about lawyers who promise quick results or guarantee success, as property cases can be complex and time-consuming.

* Never hand over original property documents to anyone without proper documentation and receipts.

* Ensure all communication with your lawyer is clear and documented, especially regarding financial matters.

* Given it's a family dispute, consider if mediation (through DLEC or other channels) could be a viable first step before full litigation, but ensure your rights are protected.

* Do not sign any document that you do not fully understand or that you have not had reviewed by an independent legal expert.
